A captivating novel that reveals how women and men of all ages worked against the Nazis.

Rachel Klein hopes she can ignore the Nazis when they roll into Amsterdam in May 1940. She’s falling in love, and her city has been the safest place in the world for Jewish people since the Spanish Inquisition. But when Rachel’s Gentile boyfriend is forced to disappear rather than face arrest, she realizes that everything is changing, and she must, too – so she finds the courage to deliver papers for the underground. After eighteen months of ever-increasing danger, she pushes her parents to go into hiding with her. The dank basement where they take refuge seems like the last place where Rachel would meet a new man—but she does.

An Address in Amsterdam shows that, even in the most hopeless situation, an ordinary young woman can make the choice to act with courage—and even love.

MEET MARY DINGEE FILLMORE

Mary Dingee Fillmore fell in love with Amsterdam in 2001 and has been returning there and researching its complex history ever since. A longtime professional facilitator for nonprofits and government, she gives talks for the Vermont Humanities Council titled “Anne Frank’s Neighbors: What Did They Do?” and writes at maryfillmore.com and seehiddenamsterdam.com.

PRAISE FOR AN ADDRESS IN AMSTERDAM

“We will never forget these characters because there is no curtain between them and us . . . Fillmore challenges us and sustains us simultaneously. . . by being true to the insistent life force, to love, beauty, snowdrops and herons that accompany the most extreme ordeals.”

“An Address in Amsterdam is a compelling story of the Jewish experience during the Nazi occupation of the Netherlands, filled with richly detailed descriptions, obviously based on extensive research.”

Amy Belding Brown, Author of *Mr. Emerson’s Wife, Flight of the Sparrow

Deena Metzger, Author of *Entering the Ghost River: Meditations on the Theory and Practice of Healing and Writing For Your Life: A Guide and a Companion into the Inner World

“The Amsterdam of World War II comes alive in this deeply-imagined, well-researched story. . . I finished the book feeling as if I had also lived through those harrowing years.”

“The taut drama of the novel stands in counterpoint to Mary Fillmore’s gentle intimacy with her characters. . . walking down every street to every address, feeling every heartbeat and breath, sharing a vision that rejects easy optimism while holding on, always, to hope.”

Diane Lefer, award-winning Author of The Fiery Alphabet; Co-author of The Blessing Next to the Wound: A story of art, activism, and transformation.

Jane Pincus, Co-author of *Our Bodies, Ourselves

“Teenaged Rachel Klein’s breathtaking story is impossible to put down.”

Katherine Bradley Johnson, NextReads Bibliographer at NovelList, a division of EBSCO
